Chicken thieves were busy at some time during Tuesday night in this city and over the line in Lebanon, taking twenty-five spring hatched White Leghorns from Harry C. Brown's premises on Mountain street, and getting away with about the same number of capons from L. J. Deppeler's place nearby. These losses were reported to the police Wednesday morning. It was also said that two or three farmers over the Lebanon line missed chickens that morning, which were presumably taken Tuesday night. Mr. Brown found the tracks of an automobile and a team near his coops and believes the raid was made in the early hours of the morning.

EAST KILLINGLY POSTMASTER. Said to Have Left Office Accounts in Good Shape.

Notwithstanding the formidable crop of rumors that the case immediately produced, investigation of them failed to develop any facts to substantiate the stories or to authorize giving them the stories or to authorize giving them more than passing consideration.

The visit to East Killingly this week of a United States postoffice inspector said to have been F. X. Riley, Hartford, was the basis for a number of the stories circulated. It is understood that Mr. Riley made an inspection of Postmaster McLaughilin's government records. It is said on very good authority that no shortage in the accounts existed. Such financial difficulties as press despatches from Providence indicate Postmaster McLaughilin may have been involved in, as indicated in a letter he is alleged to have written to friends from whom he was seeking temporary assistance, must written to friends from whom he was seeking temporary assistance, must have had to do with his private business interests rather than his public ones as an agent of the government, but even this fact has not been developed yet.
